Real World Security Problems You Can't Afford to Overlook

With most organizations being dependent on computers, there's a whole new frontier of business risks that many people don't understand or haven't thought about. In this insightful keynote presentation information security expert and noted author Kevin Beaver will talk about information security risks that you may not have considered or have been looking at from the wrong perspective. He'll outline the technical and operational security vulnerabilities he's seeing in the field, show how they're being exploited, and make the case that this is a business problem that needs attention now. You'll gain insight on what areas of security to focus on and leave with ideas on how to position information security as a critical business function required for long-term survival.
